

Photographers and designers: Ever wonder how award-winning photographers edit and manage their photos? Learn the “Rural Missouri Method” with CCA’s March webinar.

The Rural Missouri Method of photo editing and management
Wednesday, March 21

11 a.m. Eastern (10 a.m. Central; 9 a.m. Mountain; 8 a.m. Pacific)
Registration Deadline: March 14, 2012

Webinar participants will earn five points in the Technical Communication Knowledge category for MCC designation or renewal.

Presenters:

Jason Jenkins, managing editor, and Kyle Spradley, field editor, for Rural Missouri magazine, Association of Missouri Electric Cooperatives

Jason Jenkins joined the staff of Rural Missouri in 2007 and was named managing editor in 2010. He is the 2009 CCA Photographer of the Year and a two-time winner of the CCA’s Photography Contest Best of Show award. Kyle Spradley joined Rural Missouri in 2010 and was named CCA Photographer of the Year in 2011.

What you’ll learn:

Follow Rural Missouri editors Jenkins and Spradley as they take you through the process they use each month to quickly and efficiently manage and tone the publication’s award-winning photography.

The webinar will cover both the use of Adobe Bridge and Photoshop for managing your photo resources and executing basic toning processes for your photographs. Topics to be addressed include batch processing, incorporating metadata and archiving techniques; creating and using Photoshop actions, RAW converter and other Photoshop tools to improve your photographs.

Who should attend:

This webinar is designed for photographers, photo editors, designers, and anyone interested in photo editing and management.
